

EMILY MOORHOUSE EMOORHOUSE@TRIBUNE.COM

Comic book creator donating portion of proceeds to Komen

At 13 years old, Michael Ka ye didn't know anyone afflicted with cancer, but through sketches and imagination, he created Ulrius Joules, a comic character who is cured of cancer when a supernatural gem crashes through his window and transforms him into a superhero called AmphoMan.

More than 20 years later, after having his own cancer scare, Ka ye turned AmphoMan into a comic book series.

Now, the 36-year-old Cooper City resident has decided to donate 25 cents per issue sold to the South Florida Affiliate of Susan G. Komen for the Cure, based in West Palm Beach.

As the AmphoMan story goes, souls trapped inside of gems start finding their way to modern-day Earth from a long-lost planet that was destroyed by a meteor. Joules, a marine biologist who lives in South Florida and works at a research lab trying to find a cure for cancer, is among the first people to find one of the gems: a green one containing the soul of a frog.

When activated by water, the gem fuses to Joules' forehead and transforms him into a cancer-free frogman.

"When he discovered this gem and it cured him, he was ecstatic," Ka ye said of the character.

Then Joules discovers that his cancer is only gone when he is AmphoMan, a moniker formed from the words "amphibian," "H2O" and "man," and that there are other people finding gems and using their newfound abilities in destructive ways. "They're becoming like mutants. It's causing havoc," Ka ye explained. "So he took it upon himself to kind of save people."

KAYE

Ka ye was 15 when he first tried to publish AmphoMan, but when he brought the storyboard to a printer and learned it would cost him $10,000, he retired his creations to a box in the garage. Not long after that, he sold the approximately 500 comic book titles he had collected.

He went on to study 3D computer animation and work as a graphic designer at BEACON TV, a South Florida station that is run by the Broward County School Board.

In 2008, at age 32, Ka ye decided to start collecting comic books again. That same year, he had to have two surgeries to remove melanoma from his back. "I felt like a steak on the table. You're getting cut up. And that was just a taste of what cancer could do to people," he said. "...I thought of the book and said, 'Well maybe I foresaw something in my future.' "

Within the next year or two, Ka ye resurrected his drawings and storyboard and began reworking and expanding upon the AmphoMan story.

Because printing has become substantially less expensive over the past 20 years, publishing AmphoMan was no longer such a risk for Ka ye.

The father of three published the first AmphoMan book in February 2012. It contained his original drawings and some of the same text he wrote as a teenager. By May of this year, he published eight more issues that continued the story and featured all-new but still hand-drawn graphics, and last month he published a remake of the first issue that better sets the stage for the other books.

"It's definitely something now that I'm more proud of than any of the books," Ka ye said.

So far, he has printed a few hundred books. Earlier this year, he sold a sampling of the series to Tate's Comics in Lauderhill and did a signing there.

Signed physical copies are currently available for $6 and digital versions for $1 at AmphoMan.com. Ka ye is also working to grow his audience with the help of vintage, thrift and consignment shop Thriftarella's in Davie.

In late August, the continues on 15

swbrowardforum.com DCCG

10 DAVIE/COOPER CITY GAZETTE Tuesday, October 15, 2013

PARKWAY CHRISTIAN SCHOOL

SERVING:
KP - 8TH GRADES

Call 754-200-1011 to attend our Free Laser Therapy Seminar.

continued from 10

owners purchased a copy of the first AmphoMan title.

"We have known Mike Ka ye for some time and always try to promote our customers and local community efforts," said co-owner Dominick Masi. "The sign-up sheet is at our register, and we have quite a few pre-orders."

In December, Ka ye will do a signing at the shop, and Thriftarella's will match what Ka ye brings in for Komen for the Cure.

Ka ye said he plans to present the first donation to the local affiliate of the organization in December and will continue doing so at the end of each year.

Currently Ka ye is promoting AmphoMan and creating issue 10 of what he anticipates will be a 100-book series.

"Sometimes it takes me months to make one book," he said. "It's just a hobby, so I don't want it to become work. I just enjoy drawing. It's kind of like stress relief for me."

You Don't Have to Live With Pain

With a healing pulse of laser energy, patients are seeing relief in a whole new light.

Relieve Pain • Reduce Inflammation • Restore Mobility

Between hospital visits, Tom Pirelli hoped to unwind by playing golf. Choosing to make the best of a bad situation, the Pirellis had moved to a temporary home at a golf resort near

Amazing Science (in Plain English)

MLS Therapy (it stands for Multiwave Locked System) is amazingly different. So different, in fact, that it is patented. Before the MLS Laser, practitioners could use pulsed-light lasers to control swelling — OR use continuous-light lasers to control pain — BUT NOT BOTH.

By contrast, MLS Therapy delivers a healing pulse of combined, synchronized

"Why Doesn't My Doctor Know About This?"

Unfortunately, physicians who don't work with neuromusculoskeletal pain on a daily basis have not fully learned about this breakthrough therapy. Compounding the problem, doctors typically only offer patients procedures for which they can receive reimbursement